RN I.D

How to communicate with someone who has hearing loss

You are allowed to follow social distancing and lower your face covering to communicate with someone who relies on lipreading or facial expressions

Face each other

Face the person you are speaking to so they know you are talking to them and can see your face clearly

Be patient

It is a stressful time for everyone, especially people who rely on lipreading or facial expressions, so take your time and repeat if necessary

Reduce background noise

Turn down background noise, or if you can't, try to move somewhere quieter

Write things down

You can do this on paper, on your phone or using speech-to-text apps

Find out more

We are calling on all retailers to make their stores accessible for people who are deaf or have hearing loss. Find out more and get involved on our website rnid.org.uk/access-for-all

For services and training to improve access for deaf people and those with hearing loss – visit louderthanwords.org.uk

RNID is the trading name of The Royal National Institute for Deaf People. A registered charity in England and Wales (207720) and Scotland (SC038926).